The Psychologisation of Society On the Unfolding of the Therapeutic in Norway

By Ole Jacob Madsen

This book explores the manner in which psychology has increasingly crept into everyday life. Showing that Norway, like the United States and Great Britain, is currently subjected to a psychological worldview or 'therapeutic ethos', the author examines an array of spheres such as media, law, religion, self-help literature and cosmetic surgery documents to shed light on the ways in which the therapeutic ethos, rather than simply 'triumphing' over them, actually blends in with regional norms and values.

Therapeutic Worlds

Popular Psychology and the Socio-Cultural Organisation of Intimate Life

By Daniel Nehring and Dylan Kerrigan

Contributing to debates about therapeutic culture, in part by exploring some of its so-far widely under-researched facets, such as Christian religious-conservative self-help, Therapeutic Worlds offers significant points of departure from established scholarly narratives about therapeutic culture and the individualisation and fragmentation of intimate life. As such, it will appeal to scholars of cultural studies and the sociology of gender, sexuality, families and personal life.

Therapeutic Assemblages

Subjectivity, Materiality and Politics

Edited by Suvi Salmenniemi, Johanna Nurmi, Inna Perheentupa and Harley Bergroth

This volume examines the ways in which people incorporate new therapeutic practices, such as self-help literature, life coaching, mindfulness, 'alternative' healing and self-tracking into their everyday lives. Presenting ethnographic case studies, it pays close attention to the material, spiritual and political aspects of people's practices, and introduces the notion of 'therapeutic assemblages' to investigate how human and non-human actors, systems of thought and practice are assembled and interwoven in therapeutic engagements.
